THIS is the Silver Anniversary Edition of the ALMANAC —the twenty-fifth annual volume in the series which has been dedicated, year by year, to the purpose of supplying authoritative information and statistics concerning motion picture industry events, institutions and personnel. Originally the ALMANAC was devoted exclusively to the motion picture world. Commencing last year, and continuing in this edition, new departments have been added which bring within the purview of the ALMANAC, with like service, the sister art and industry of Television, thereby affording in a single volume an indispensable source of essential facts and information relative to the most vital elements of the entertainment world.

The estimated box office gross for 1953 is $1,213,000,000, including an estimated $202,000,000 in ticket taxes. (Compo).

Motion picture theatres took in 71.9 cents of every dollar spent on spectator amusements in 1952. The total in 1951 was 73.1 cents and in 1950 74 cents. (Department of Commerce) Of the total personal expenditures for all forms of recreation motion pictures accounted for 9.7 cents in 1952, 10.5 cents in 1951, and 10.9 cents in 1950. This was exceeded in the Department of Commerce's records only by radios, television receivers, (including repairs and service) phonographs, records and musical instruments which accounted for 19.8 cents in 1952, 21.3 cents in 1951, and 25 cents in 1950; and by the expenditure for magazines, newspapers and sheet music which was 12.5 cents in 1952, 12.1 cents in 1951 and 11.8 cents in 1950.

NUMBER OF THEATRES:

There were 14,462 permanent four-wall theatres regularly exhibiting motion pictures as of July, 1953, and 3,950 drive-in theatres, more than a third of which are open all year round. The Bureau of the Census, on the basis of its business census of 1948 computed the total number of theatres operating that year at 17,689 but it was admitted that many of these were open only irregularly. A survey by Quigley Publications in 1948 found that there were 16,880 indoor theatres open more than three days a week and more than three months a year. Compo in April, 1953, computed that 3,085 theatres had closed since 1948. Independent sources estimate the number of new theatres built and opened between 1948 and July, 1953, at 667.

The 3,950 drive-in theatres operating at mid-year, 1953, represent a growth in that field from 100 theatres in 1946. In 1948 there were 820 and last year there were 3,483. Average capacity is estimated at 500 cars. (For a list of drive-in theatres operating in the U. S. see pages 485-533.)

There are 647 circuits, each with four or more theatres, operating 51% of the total houses with 64.1% of the total seats. (Department of Commerce figures). For list of circuits in the U. S. and Canada see pages 414-467.

There are 6,795 individuals or companies operating the remaining 49% of the theatres with 35.9% of the seats. (Department of Commerce figures).

It is estimated that gross refreshment sales in indoor and drive-in theatres total over $250,000,000 annually, that each indoor theatre patron spends an average of six cents on refreshments, and each drive-in patron 20 cents.

Approximately 70 per cent of the film rental gross on an average A picture comes from 1,000 key run bookings, 80 per cent of it from 5,000 bookings, and 90 per cent of it from 7,500 bookings.

The theatres seating more than 400 (9,000) sell 91 1/3% of the admissions per week, and the theatres with less than 401 seats sell 8 2/3% of the tickets.

Eighty-five per cent of all circuit theatres have a capacity of more than 400, and 44% of the non-circuit theatres have a capacity of more than 400.

Total expenses for exhibition in 1952 were $1,201,632,000 and it is estimated the 1953 figure will be $1,200,200,000. In 1946 they were $1,208,989,000 and in 1948 $1,205,876,000. (Compo)

THEATRES IN CANADA:

The Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association reported that at the end of 1952 there were 1,924 indoor theatres and 104 drive-ins operating in Canada, compared with 1,313 in 1940. The 1,924 standard theatres have 963,914 seats compared with 945,982 in 1951. Car capacity at drive-ins increased from 37,786 in 1951 to 48,337 in 1952. In the six months ended June, 1953, it is estimated that 12 new indoor theatres and 15 new drive-ins were opened in the Dominion.

HOW THE ADMISSION DOLLAR IS DIVIDED:

Motion picture theatres in 1952 received 71.9 cents of every dollar spent on spectator admissions. In 1929, the theatre's share was 78.8 cents; in 1933, 84.2 cents; in 1940, 80.9 cents; in 1945, 82.2 cents; in 1950, 74 cents.

Total spending on motion pictures in relation to other spectator sports for the period from 1942 through 1952, according to the Department of Commerce, is shown in the following chart ($000,000 omitted):

Distribution

EXCHANGE OPERATIONS:

Motion picture distribution in the United States is handled by 609 exchanges, of which 394 are operated by major national distributor companies and 215 by independent distributors.

Estimated gross film rental income to the major distributors is estimated at $357,000,000 for 1953. In 1946 it was $466,000,000.

Distributors estimate that the average feature picture plays between 600 and 700 theatres in the first four months of its release.

Receipts of U. S. distributors from rentals and other activities, world-wide, amounted to $533,963,000 in 1948, a gain of 123 per cent over $239,697,000 in 1939, according to the Census Bureau. Receipts in 1948 were 142 per cent higher than $220,606,000 in 1929.

Of the international total, domestic distributors grossed $407,120,000 or approximately 76 per cent of the grand total. Distribution abroad accounted for the remaining 24 per cent, or $126,843,000.

Producer-distributors did a U. S. total in 1948 of $379,279,000, which breaks down into $356,997,000 in rentals from commercial theatres, $14,573,000 from other types of theatres and $7,709,000 from merchandise sales and miscellaneous receipts.

Independent distributors did a U. S. total in 1948 of $27,841,000, which breaks down into $21,141,000 in rentals from commercial theatres, $6,414,000 in rentals from other types of theatres and $286,000 in miscellaneous receipts.

Forty-two distributors engaged in export did a 1948 total of $126,843,000, of which $126,610,000 came from rentals and $233,000 from miscellaneous activities.

New York City ranked first among U. S. exchanges in that year with distributor receipts of $191,757,000, which was 35.9 per cent of the 1948 national total. This represents an increase of 360 per cent over $41,600,000 done in 1939.

Four other exchange cities reported 1948 receipts in excess of $20,000,000. They were: Los Angeles, $32,398,000; Philadelphia, $23,130,000; Chicago, $22,530,000 and Boston, $21,905,000.

Production

PRODUCTION COSTS:

Department of Commerce statistics show that the cost of motion picture production of all types in the United States has increased sharply every year since 1921 when it puts the annual cost at $86,000,000. The same source places production costs at $184,000,000 in 1929, at $215,000,000 in 1939 and at better than $460,000,000 in 1948. Motion Picture Almanac estimates production investment of all types in excess of $500,000,000 in 1953.

According to industry estimates, the average feature production cost of the major U. S. companies increased almost four times since the beginning of World War II. In 1941, average cost per feature was $400,000. In 1949, this had risen to more than $1,500,000. Motion Picture Almanac estimates average cost per production in 1953 at $900,000.

HOW THE PRODUCTION DOLLAR IS DIVIDED:

The average production budget is divided as follows (Floyd B. Odlum):

Story costs	5%
Production and direction costs	5
Sets and other physical properties	35
Stars and cast	20
Studio overhead	20
Income taxes	5
Net profit after taxes	10

A total of 317 features were produced and released by Hollywood companies in 1952 compared with 369 in 1951.

Federal admission tax collections for the year ending June 30, 1953, were $307,954,410. This compares with $328,861,009 for the preceding year. The Bureau of Internal Revenue estimates that motion picture admissions account for 75% of the total admission tax collections, applied over a long term to allow for seasonal variations.

Admission tax collections for the six months from July through December, 1952, were $171,739,901 and for the six months from January through June, 1953, they were $136,214,509.

Television Industry

There were 24,292,600 U. S. homes with television sets as of June 1, 1953, according to an estimate by Hugh M. Beville, Jr., NBC director of research and planning. This was an increase of 362,600 sets during the month of May, smallest monthly increase of 1953 but nearly 100,000 more sets than were added during May, 1952. Five cities have more than 1,000,000 sets. They are: New York, 3,535,000; Chicago, 1,570,000; Los Angeles, 1,460,000; Philadelphia, 1,255,000, and Boston, 1,061,000.

Television set production during the first six months of 1953 was a record 3,834,236 sets, the Radio-Television Manufacturers Association reported. This compares with a previous high of 3,457,519 sets in 1951. June television set production was put at 524,479 sets, compared with 361,152 produced in June, 1952.

June 30, 1953 marked the conclusion of the first year of processing applications for new television stations since the lifting of the freeze by the Federal Communications Commission. In that one year period the FCC authorized 398 new stations of which 89 have received special temporary authorizations to start operation. Of the post-freeze grants, 256 are for operation in the new ultra-high frequency bands and 142 are for VHF operation. Seventeen of the grants were for non-commercial educational stations.

There were 14,099 people employed in television broadcasting in 1952, 12,412 of them full-time.

For 93 TV stations the average original investment in tangible property amounted to $592,262. This varied by size of the community—the average of 29 stations constructed in the largest markets of 1,000,000 population and over was $923,716; while stations in the smaller markets of less than 250,000 population cost under $300,000.

FINANCIAL:

Total broadcast revenues of the television industry in 1952 were $324,200,000, an increase of 38 per cent over the preceding year, according to final figures for the period compiled by the FCC. It marked the first time that TV network time sales exceeded radio network time sales. Broadcast revenues include sales of time, talent and program material to advertisers.

Total broadcast income in 1952 was reported at $55,500,000 before Federal income taxes, or 33 per cent above 1951.

Networks, including 15 owned and operated TV stations, reported 1952 TV revenues of $180,200,000, almost double the networks AM radio revenues. Expenses of $170,300,000, however, brought TV income down to $9,900,000. On the other hand, smaller AM radio expenses resulted in $10,200,000 income for that branch.

The 93 non-network pre-freeze TV stations reported total broadcast revenues of $143,400,000, or an average of $1,541,825 per station during 1952. Average station expenses totalled $1,049,474, and average income $492,351.

The 14 TV stations authorized since the lifting of the freeze and which began operations in 1952, reported aggregate revenues of $600,000 during the year, expenses of $800,000 and resulting losses of $200,000. Only three were in commercial operation for more than two months in 1952.

Profitable operation during the year was reported by 94 of the 108 pre-freeze stations, with 17 reporting profits before Federal income tax of $1,000,000 or more.

Of the 14 stations reporting losses, nine were located in New York and Los Angeles, the two seven-station markets. Of the losing stations, nine had total revenues of over $1,000,000. None of the 40 stations located in one-station markets suffered a loss in 1952.

New York's seven stations had total revenues of $26,800,000, with $20,800,000 in expenses, resulting in income of $6,000,000 before taxes. The seven Los Angeles stations, together, had expenses of $19,400,000 with $17,900,000 in total revenues failing by $1,500,000 to match the expenses.

GENERAL:

There are 36,000,000 families with available TV network service in the United States and a total of 24,100,000 families in these areas own sets. A total of 79 per cent of the U. S. population lives in areas where TV broadcast service is available and 53 per cent of the total number of families own TV sets. (All figures from NBC)

There are 3.7 persons in the average TV family and they spend 4.77 hours per day per TV home looking at their sets. This is a 12 month average from May, 1952 to April, 1953, to remove seasonal variation. (A. C. Nielson Co.)

There are approximately 60,000 technicians engaged in the installation and repair of television sets.

A total of 239 advertisers used network television during 1952, five less than the 1951 figure. Network radio showed a net gain of 22 advertisers in 1952, from 227 to 249.

EVOLUTION or REVOLUTION—

A Year of Transition

by CHARLES S. AARONSON

July 31, 1953

WHETHER or not this year to mid-1953 has been a twelve-month of real progress for the motion picture industry or merely a period of transitional alteration of presentation methods only time will tell with certainty. In any event, however, there can be no gainsaying the fact that not in many a year, in fact not since sound exploded on the motion picture scene, has the art-industry of the screen been so shaken.

The advent of new devices for making and exhibiting pictures of course, was the outstanding and deeply challenging something new which happened to the industry in the year to date.

The history of toyings with Three-Dimension motion pictures is part of the screen's story for which this is not the place. The dabblings of yester-years meant little in terms of screen advancement, public popularity or dollars in the industry's collective till. But out of this long background, inventive genius and scientific endeavor of the highest order came Cinerama, now a household word, in mid-1952 unknown except to a few who had faith in an idea.

The man chiefly responsible for Cinerama was Fred Waller, who developed a Gunnery Trainer for Air Force trainees during the last war, credited with saving countless lives by reason of its tremendous advances as a training device.

On September 30, 1952, at the Broadway theatre in New York there opened Cinerama—and a new era in the technique of the motion picture had slipped out upon a then unsuspecting industry.

Cinerama was an instantaneous and crackling success, showing what amounted to a series of travel shorts and scenics, with narration by Lowell Thomas. On a reserved seat basis, at increased admissions, it was sensational. Cinerama was not true 3-D, but it gave an unquestioned sense of depth, of range, and with the stereophonic sound which accompanied it, was for the average audience quite terrific. Under the seductively brilliant hand of Lynn Farnol, publicist and promoter extraordinary, Cinerama really went to town.

That was the opening wedge. Then on November 27, 1952, in Los Angeles, opened a picture called "Bwana Devil," in true 3-D, and utilizing the polarized spectacles without which true 3-D cannot be seen as such. "Bwana Devil" was made on a shoe string and the African veldt by the knowing Arch Oboler, was scorned by industry interests who saw it. But the public, far from scorning it, stormed it, wherever it played (United Artists finally bought it for distribution) and the industry in the twinkling of an anamorphic lens, was off to the races.

And it was a race—for into the starting shoots came 20th Century-Fox, with CinemaScope, various aspect ratios and wide screen procedures, Warners' WarnerSuperScope, other true 3-D methods, with glasses, without glasses, while exhibition held its head, watched the whirling spiral of transition, and pleaded for standardization. In true 3-D the standout was Warners' "House of Wax," a grosser and a thriller, early in 1953.

All this came upon the industry in the Autumn days of 1952 when business was at a low ebb, nationwide at the theatre, and with the blame assigned variously to Television, Federal amusement tax, the usual outside competition, bad pictures, etc., etc.

But balancing that, at least to some extent, although not to a satisfactory degree, were such outstanding pictures making the rounds as "The Greatest Show on Earth," "Moulin Rouge," "Call Me Madam," "Come Back Little Sheba," "Hans Christian Andersen," "Ivanhoe," "Peter Pan," "A Queen Is Crowned," "Snows of Kilimanjaro," "High Noon," "Miracle of Fatima," "Quiet Man," "Quo Vadis," "Walk East on Beacon" and some others. There were good pictures, many of them, but not enough, apparently, to make an appreciable dent in industry pessimism.

But then, as 1953 slipped past Winter and into Spring, there came something of a subtle change in industry thinking and talking. With 3-D, and the other devices dominating the news of the business, with wide and assiduous promotion and exploitation of the new techniques, in which Spyros Skouras of 20th Century-Fox, with his CinemaScope, was certainly one of the prime factors, the public began to react to the "movies" once again. Even if they didn't like everything they saw, at least they were talking about it, and that was all to the good.

And on other fronts, there was stirring, and activity and change. Television, which impinges so decidedly on the motion picture, emerged from the shackles of the "freeze" imposed by the Federal Communications Commission several years ago, and with the freeze lifted in July, 1952, stations sprang up like weeds in an untended garden. The 108 stations of "freeze days" became close to 400 by mid-1953 with more approved and more en route every minute across the face of the nation.

And the fears which had befogged the motion picture began to be dissipated, and the film industry turned to the new medium as a most promising advertising medium for the wares of the screen. There were reciprocal tie-ups which seemed to benefit everyone concerned, there was increased use of the TV for "spot" announcements of new pictures, and there seemed less danger of serious box office damage inflicted by Television. The two media began to learn that it was possible to live with each other in the same entertainment world.

Another aspect of the TV-Screen situation was the development of Theatre Television, a method by which the motion picture theatre would show specific events on its screen over a closed circuit, not available to the home viewer. It worked well in initial events, and was seemingly headed somewhere with speed, but then arrived 3-D, new techniques and the like and at mid-1953 Theatre Television was not discarded, but resting through the Summer. There was no slightest question there was more to be heard from that quarter later.

The abortive attempts, led by Zenith's Phonevision, to sell the public on subscription television, or "pay-as-you-see," or "money-in-the-slot" television, had not thus far shown anything of consequence, although pictures had been made available under FCC pressure, and experiments still were being carried forward.

Television still had a pressing program problem of material, and sought more and still more product from Hollywood. In consequence, there grew in Hollywood a whole new school of production, which was concentrating solely on the making of short pictures for the wide open, and never-satiated maw of Television. The furor about selling new feature, theatrical product to TV was dying as the practice slowed to a walk.

The industry, during the year, emerged into a more settled pattern, trade-wise, with respect to its operation under the Consent Decrees which had terminated after long years in the courts of the land the Anti-Trust action of the United States Government against the industry's major companies, called The U. S. vs. Paramount, et al.

Divorced as to exhibition on the one hand, and production-distribution on the other, were Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warners and Loew's. All this did not happen in the year under discussion here, but some of it came to pass. Notably in this year, S. H. Fabian of Fabian Theatres sought and bought control of the divorced Warner Theatres when the brothers Warner determined to cast their lot with the picture company. So came to pass the Stanley Warner Company and a rather intriguing bit of fateful merry-go-round, since Mr. Fabian's father had originally operated his theatres with the Stanley interests, which later became Warner Theatres.

Of equal note and of outstanding importance and significance to the industry and its operation was the acquisition by United Paramount Theatres (nee Paramount Theatres, before divorce) of the American Broadcasting Corporation, and the emergence therefrom of the newly named AB—Paramount Theatres, Inc.

And in the early months of 1953, with business, as has been hitherto recorded, showing a not too pink and healthy glow in the cheek, there was blame set heavily, among other things, on the Federal amusement tax, which hit motion pictures as it did all other entertainment—only more so, and more often.

The industry was making motions in the direction of seeking to win some tax relief from a new, Republican Congress, and an Administration which did not exactly turn a deaf ear but which made loud noises like "Let's balance the budget first."

Then there was COMPO (Council of Motion Picture Organizations) which had had a fitful existence, had been despaired of several times, had shown signs of life intermittently, and was in early 1953 functioning, as it were, under a Triumvirate Regency of men representative of the Theatre Owners of America (Sam Pinanski), Allied States Association (Trueman Rembusch) and Distribution (Al Lichtman). COMPO had a tax committee headed by Col. H. A. Cole of Texas, Pat McGee of Denver and Robert W. Coyne, special counsel.

This group of men, who knew, or learned very rapidly, how to find its way around Washington, began to make things happen, aided and abetted by an inundation of Congressmen by their stimulated industry constituents from across the length and breadth of the country.

And so, in the early Summer weeks, as Congress sought to move rapidly toward adjournment, the Mason Bill, which specifically exempted motion picture theatres from the Federal amusement tax, came to the forefront of Congressional attention. The COMPO committee worked tirelessly and well.

The House Ways and Means Committee rather unexpectedly reported out the bill to the House early in July, 1953, without amendments, which, it was agreed, would have effectually killed the measure. Then, on the evening of July 20, the House, by voice vote and almost without opposition passed the Mason Bill (now H.R. 157), and sent it on to the Senate. The industry was breathless with surprise and elation but was not hopeful.

Then the truly unexpected occurred, as the Senate Finance Committee on July 22 at midday reported the bill out to the Senate favorably and without amendment. On the afternoon of Friday, July 24, the Senate, also by voice vote and again almost without opposition, passed H.R. 157 and sent it to President Eisenhower, with the prayers of an entire industry behind it. The President, faced with a charge of inconsistency, vetoed the repeal bill. It was a lost fight—but a good one.

The motion picture industry had demonstrated an ability to unify for a common purpose. The tax development had reinspired a sense of brighter horizons ahead in the whole industry of the screen for a new show year ahead.

Twentieth-Fox Inaugurates ...a policy of confidence

By CHESTER B. BAHN

AT A TIME when it is obviously highly desirable, perhaps urgently needed, Twentieth Century-Fox inaugurates a production policy that dramatically spells confidence not only in the good motion picture but in the commercial theater which is best suited for its profitable exhibition.

The reference, of course, is to the recent disclosure by Darryl F. Zanuck, the company's vice-president in charge of production, that the 20th-Fox studio will turn out more high-cost, top pictures this year than at any time in its history

While Zanuck did not give the over-all budget, t hat seven Technicolor productions alone will represent an investment of more than $20, 00 makes it crystal-clear 20th-Fox is backing its market judgment with one of the st, (if not the largest), Hollywood bankrolls of 1953.
